REPORT OF THE SCHOOL BOARD OF DUBLIN, N. H.

FOR THE YEAR ENDING FEB. 15, 1895.

In reviewing the work of the year, for the purpose of making this, the seventy-third annual report of the schools of Dublin, we find that much good work has been done, and although the results in the different schools have not all been what was hoped for, yet in no instance have we had failure. The town, at present, furnishes but one available teacher, therefore the business of procuring and assigning teachers is one of considerable risk. The literary qualifications of the teachers for the past year have been good, some superior, and all should be commended for the faithfulness with which they tried to carry out their several methods of teaching school.

The effect of the interest or indifference of the parents in the educational opportunities offered to the scholars in town, has been clearly shown, in the quality and amount of work accomplished, in the regularity of attendance, and the respect which the pupils have shown for their teachers. It is to be regretted that the scholars in town leave school at such an early age. It takes away from our schools that character of earnest endeavor which stamps the work of maturer minds, and substitutes careless and imperfect work in the school room, and a tendency to rude and uncouth manners.

The habits of study today are not of a nature that tends to lasting results. That scholar is not engaged in hard study, whose attention is easily arrested by the trivial happenings of those about him. At the time when our scholars attended school until they "came to years of discretion," it was not an uncommon occurrence for a pupil to pass a term without whispering or communicating. The practice of studying together is productive of more harm than good. That work which is accomplished by one's own efforts, will be the one which can be recalled in after years, when necessity demands its use.

Before the commencement of the spring terms, it was decided that the revised edition of Colburn's Arithmetic, used in our schools, was not the true mental arithmetic desired, so it was replaced by the old edition and teachers asked to give it especial attention. The pupil who has mastered this little book, has sufficient arithmetical knowledge for all ordinary purposes, and has little to fear in the knotty problems to be found in the higher mathematics.

Heretofore, music has never been placed in our schools as a study, but the great necessity of awakening an interest in this sweet but neglected art, led to its introduction in our schools as an experiment, during the summer terms. The services of Miss Bertha I. Smith, of Marlboro', were secured as teacher. Ten lessons of one hour each, were given to each school. The results being so satisfactory, it was thought best to have the instruction continued through the fall terms. The singing at the closing examinations has been pleasing to the visitors, and the general verdict has been, that the money was well spent.

One of the most important subjects taught in our schools, but one which has not received its share of attention, is language or composition. To express one's self grammatically, elegantly, and with precision, should be the ambition of all. The average scholar needs a great amount of practice in composition work to become familiar with its fundamental rules. With this end in view, a uniform plan of work was adopted for the fall terms. The older scholars were to write historical essays, upon the settlement of New England, including that of New Hampshire and Dublin. Letter-writing, in all its forms, by all the scholars, was included in the plan of work. The results were pleasing and satisfactory. It showed that the writing schools of the past year had had a good effect upon the penmanship of the scholars, among whom there are perhaps a dozen, who may, with practice, become expert penmen. It is not sufficient, however, that our writing be fine, but that what we have to say is correctly written and properly arranged.

There have been a number of applications from scholars, for books to be used through the vacations. Although the Board favor the practice of study between terms, it was not thought best to establish the precedent of loaning books, unless there was to be some regular plan of instruction. A bible, dictionary, arithmetic, geography and grammar should be found among the books in every home. Every year the opinion grows stronger in town, that there are serious drawbacks in furnishing free text-books in our schools. Before the law was passed our scholars were generally well supplied with books of their own.

The $350.00 appropriated by the town for repairs, has been expended at Nos. 3 and 5. Each school house has received two coats of paint, the school rooms sheathed overhead with a hard finish, and the seats and tops of the desks dressed over. At No. 3 the chimney was relaid and an open shed built, 18x18 feet, and connected with the girls' entry by a covered walk. New closets were built in the shed, leaving sufficient room for a supply of wood and shelter for two teams.

SPECIAL REPORTS.

No. 1. Both terms were under the instruction of the same teacher, whose literary qualifications, wide experience, and interest in her work could not fail to secure good results. She was not confined to text-books, but brought in much outside information, thereby greatly increasing the usefulness of the lessons. Her methods are modern, yet sufficiently her own to be of practical value. The examinations were interesting and showed that the pupils had made good progress. The paintings in oil, of flowers, by a member of the botany class, and the drawings upon the blackboard by the philosophy class, were very creditable. The composition work was good, and penmanship superior. The appearance of the school during the winter term was greatly marred by whispering and unbecoming behavior.

No. 2. Summer term. All the good that has been said of this teacher in the past, can be truthfully repeated today. There is no backsiding; her motto seems to be, "Onward." Her teaching is characteristic for its breadth and thoroughness. A visit to her school is never tiresome, and her closing examinations are literary treats. Her familiarity with this school, as its occasional teacher, placed her in a position to see its wants, and her knowledge of books the power to supply its demands. Of course the scholars made good progress, and all were satisfied with the work accomplished.

Fall Term. The school opened auspiciously, with nineteen pupils, but after a short time it became evident that the teacher's methods and manners were not conducive of the most harmonious relations between scholar and teacher. There was a gradual falling off in numbers and examination day found but eleven pupils present. The school privileges of Dublin are not so great that the scholars in town can afford to neglect a term or any part of it. Although the exercises at the close of the term lacked life, it was evident that good work had been accomplished, thoroughness being the aim of the teacher. His best work is perhaps with beginners. Reading did not receive sufficient attention. The appearance of the school during the term was a great improvement over the silly, snickering ways which have greatly marred its appearance for some years. We hope there will be no falling back from the present standard.

No. 3. Summer Term. A feeling of dissatisfaction having sprung up in the district before the commencement of the term, the teacher labored at a great disadvantage. The true sympathy which should bind parents, pupils and teacher together, and without which no school can be a perfect success, was lacking. The teacher has already been too severely criticised. She worked hard to make the school a success, and when experience has worn away the sharp corners of her methods, we predict more satisfactory results. The appearance of the school during the term was good, and the school room neat. Her methods of teaching history and geography were excellent. The sudden death of the teacher's father caused the school to close without examination at the end of the tenth week.

Fall Term.—The selection of teacher for the second term, proved a good one. The key note of her success was that she had a winning way and was thoroughly in earnest. From the first it was plain that the one purpose, in the minds of all, was, to make the term a successful one.

Improvement in the neatness of the copy books was noticeable. The teacher's musical ability, seconding the efforts of Miss Smith, was productive of good results. The botanical work during this term and also that in Nos. 1 and 2 in the summer was excellent. To familiarize country children with, and awaken an interest in trees, plants, flowers, and seeds, is laudable work, and we hope to see more of it in the future. There is no more humiliating failure than to be found lacking in the knowledge of things with which we are supposed to be perfectly familiar.

No. 4. This school has had a most successful year, being under the instruction of the same faithful and conscientious teacher as last year. She is by nature endowed with the qualities which are necessary in a successful teacher. Her literary qualifications and methods are similar to those of Miss Derby and Miss Tenney, and to speak of them in detail will be but to repeat what has already been said in this report. This school has established a reputation for its good order and strict attention to work. The results, therefore, are very satisfactory, and it is difficult to single out any one thing as better than another. From every point of view the composition work was excellent, as was the memory drawing put upon the board to illustrate the recitation in philosophy. Good, practical instruction in physiology was given orally to the whole school.

No. 5. The summer term was under the charge of a young lady of winning ways, and pleasant relations existed between her and the pupils. She worked faithfully, and was fairly successful. Some of the new methods of teaching, exemplified at the Teacher's Institutes, were tried quite successfully in this school, but we fail to see the advantage, with our limited school privileges, of teaching written work to the little folks and omitting print.

The extreme reticence of some of the pupils, adds much to the labors of the teacher and detracts from the general appearance of the school.

Fall term was taught by one who, by experience and teaching, was well fitted to lead the little folks up the Mount of Knowledge. She is on the lookout for new ideas, and cannot fail to inspire her pupils to good work, by her own enthusiasm. By her patience and fidelity, she won the respect and good will of the scholars, and the term was a successful one.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC PARK.

Your committee on public park has communicated with two owners of land bordering on Monadnock Lake, one on the north and one on the south side. The owner on the north shore refused to sell; the owner on the south shore, Mr. Geo. A. Gowing, has made to your committee the following proposition: He will sell to the town of Dublin a tract of land one hundred and fifty (150) feet long by one hundred (100) feet wide, situated between the highway leading from the Wait Corner, so called, to the residence of Col. T. W. Higginson and the lake shore, and west of land now owned by one Colony—for the sum of $1,000. Also that he will give to the town a tract of land of the above dimensions adjoining the aforesaid tract of land on the west, the whole to be kept as a public park for said town of Dublin.

While your committee and the town may think this a large sum to pay for a park of this size, the question arises where on the shores of Monadnock Lake can a tract of land suitable for this purpose be bought at a less price?

Respectfully submitted,

F. A. PIERCE, Committee.
